

Google Required Pass-Through End User Terms

Mobile Terms of Service

By using Google's mobile products and services ("Services"), you:

1. Agree to be bound by these terms and a) the YouTube Terms of Use (m.google.com/tos_youtube) for YouTube-related Services, b) the Google Maps Terms and Conditions (m.google.com/tos_maps) for mapping, local and location-based Services, and c) the Google Terms of Service (m.google.com/utos) for all other Services, as updated from time to time. You may use the Services only as set forth in these agreements. Do not use while driving.
2. Acknowledge and agree that third parties may offer Services, and that you may be subject to third party terms and that third parties may enforce terms against you. Google is not responsible for third party changes to the Services.
3. Consent to the collection, use, sharing, and onward transfer of your data, including but not limited to voice and location data, as outlined in the Mobile Privacy Policy (m.google.com/privacy). Location data may be from mixed sources and may not be accurate. Use at your own risk.
4. Acknowledge that certain Services require phone service, data access or text messaging capability. Except as otherwise noted, Google does not charge for the Services, but carrier rates for phone, data and text messaging may apply.

The Services may contain third party content. Any required attribution or notice for the third party content may be found at m.google.com/legalnotices. For a web version of this, please go to m.google.com/static/tos.html

Google Privacy Policy

The Google Privacy Policy and our various product-specific privacy notices describe how we treat personal information when you use Google's products and services, including any of Google's mobile products and services. In addition, the following describes our mobile privacy practices.

For a web version of this and other Google privacy policies, please go to www.google.com/privacy.html.

Mobile-specific information we collect:

* Most of the personally identifying information we collect is what you tell us about yourself. For example, certain of our products and services allow you to interact and share personal information and data with others. You choose what you want to share and how you want to share it.

* Sometimes, we record your phone number. We record your phone number when you send it to us; ask us to remember it; or make a call or send a text message or SMS to or from Google. If you ask us to remember your phone number, we will associate your phone number with your Google Account, or, if you do not have a Google Account, with some other similar account ID. We often generate this account ID based on your device and hardware IDs, so if you change your device or hardware, you will have to re-associate this new device or hardware with your account before we can authenticate you.

* Most of the other information we collect for mobile, such as your device and hardware IDs and device type, the request type, your carrier, your carrier user ID, and the content of your request, does not by itself identify you to Google, though it may be unique or consist of or contain information that you consider personal.

* If you use location-enabled products and services, such as Google Maps for mobile, you may be sending us location information. This information may reveal your actual location, such as GPS data, or it may not, such as when you submit a partial address to look at a map of the area.

* Certain of our products and services allow you to personalize the content you receive from us. For these products and services, we will record your preferences and any information you provide about yourself or your interests (such as a list of your stocks to personalize your stock listings).

* If you use Google to transcode, or format, non-mobile pages to display properly on your device, we need to send your request to Google's servers for formatting. That means that we will record these requests, which are generally for material beyond Google's sites.

* For products and services with voice recognition capabilities, we collect and store a copy of the voice commands you make to the product or service. To improve processing of your voice commands, we may also continuously record in temporary memory a few seconds of ambient background noise. This recording stays only temporarily on the device and is not sent to Google.

Uses

* We use your information to process and personalize your requests. We also use the information for support, to develop new features, and to improve the overall quality of Google's products and services.

* We may also use the information to show you a history of your activity, to provide you with statistics about you or your use of our product or service, or to provide you with a better user experience.

* If you purchase something through Google, we may also use your information to bill you and to handle billing disputes.

Information sharing and onward transfer

* All requests must be sent through your mobile carrier's network and your carrier may have access to it. For information regarding your carrier's treatment of your information, please consult your carrier's privacy policies.

* We may share your information with certain third parties we use to perform certain functions, such as billing and text message or SMS delivery. These third parties will be contractually bound to treat your information in accordance with the applicable Google privacy policies.

* Certain of our products and services allow you to interact and share your information with others. Please consider carefully before disclosing any personal information or data that might be accessible to others.

Your choices

* Certain of our products and services allow you to opt-out of certain information gathering and sharing or to opt-out of certain products, services, or features. Each product has a help page which describes these and other options.

More information

Google adheres to the US Safe Harbor privacy principles. For more information about the Safe Harbor framework or our registration, see the Department of Commerce's web site. Further information about Google's various mobile products and services is available at mobile.google.com.

For more information about our privacy practices, go to the full privacy policy. If you have additional questions, please contact us any time at:

Privacy Matters
c/o Google Inc.
1600 Amphitheatre Parkway
Mountain View CA 94043 (USA)

The device will attempt to access your location using Google's location service. This service adds location capability to applications on this device. To improve the service, anonymous and aggregate location data will be sent periodically, regardless of application usage. By clicking agree below, you agree to our Terms of Service (m.google.com/static/tos.html) and to the collection, use, sharing and onward transfer of your location data in accordance with our Privacy Policy (www.google.com/privacy.html). Each application may have its own privacy policy, and you will have the option to allow or disallow location access for each application.